A Time for Joy

TT IS A felicitous circumstance that Canada's birthday comes not on a murky wet day in November, for example, but on July 1, a time for joy, when the children have been freshly liberated from school; when many families are setting out to see other parts of the country and countless others are at least anticipating and planning that pleasure.

Prideful pleasure it is, too, for Canadians who follow the highroads and byways of their own land. commends British Columbians to do this summer. In British Columbia, he says, but no doubt he means through the province to other parts of Canada also. He would be the last to put up a barrier on the Trans-Canada Highway, which is a two-way road that benefits us all as Canadians no matter which way it is travelled.

Regrettably though the travel that helps bind the country together and provides such enjoyment too often also leads to pain and misery, especially on long weekends like this when the roads are crowded.

No citing of the rapidly growing toll of death, injury and damage on the highways will impress the out-and-out reckless driver, it seems. But to all sensible motorists—and for that matter swimmers and boaters and climbers—the thought surely will appeal that if this is to be a time for happiness, it must also be a time for caution and prudence. A holiday from accidental deaths would be Canada's best birthday gift.

Many Happy Returns

HENCEFORTH Dominion Day will have a double significance for the people of Victoria and Vancouver Island.

Not only will it be the day on which we commemorate the melding of various parts of Canada into one great Confederation, but it will also become the anniversary of the founding of the University of

On July 1, 1963, the old and respected Victoria College gives up its charter and takes on a new one vested with the rank and dignity of a full and independent university—the University of Victoria.

To many who have been struggling for years to this goal, the recognition may be long overdue. Over 50 years ago, the citizens of B.C.'s capital city fought a long, bitter, and losing battle to have the University of British Columbia sited in Victoria.

The government of the day decided that the main-land with its greater population expansion was the place, and in retrospect it must be said that they made

But since then, Vancouver Island has developed culturally, economically and industrially to a degree that its right to a university of its own could no longer be denied. The B.C. government, and Premier Bennett in particular, has for several years shared this view, and there is no doubt that the premier's enthusiaem for the cause did a great deal to hasten the happy natal event to be celebrated this week.

The University of Victoria will be the 25th independent university in Canada, and Victoria will become the 21st university city in the nation.

Because July 1 is a holiday, the official founding ceremony at the Gordon Head campus will take place on Tuesday, July 2. On this notable occasion the Lieutenant-Governor, Major-General the Hon. George R. Pearkes, will officiate and lay the cornerstone of the new university library.

The first university activity on the campus will be the annual summer school, this year to be attended be the annual summer school, this year to be attended by about 900 students. Then in September the regu-lar assions of the new university will begin.

At first Victoria will provide degrees in the arts and sciences, but the sights for the new hall of higher learning have been set high, and the many friends of the university will be disappointed if new faculties are not conceived, raised and brought to a maturity which will eventually redound to the honor and glory of the city.

There are fortunately among the deans and professors of the faculty men and women of brilliant minds for whom the creation of the new university will provide a breadth of opportunity to put their aims and ideas into practice. We wish them well.

The Inner Fibre

THE prime minister has entered hospital for a minor aurgical operation. There is no suggestion of any complications and he is expected to be back at his desk in about ten days, which offers reassurance as to his physical condition.

This is said to be the first time in 45 years, not since a wartime plane crash in 1918, that Mr. Pearson has had cause to be in hospital. Obviously he has enjoyed good health, and the circumstance emphasisms this vital factor in the lives of them. vital factor in the lives of those who hold high ablic office. The strains of heavy and pressing responsibility are great. Especially so for men on whom the chief purden of national affairs rests. Not a few leaders of state crumple under their exhausting cares. Mental and physical well-being can thus be a paramount factor in the decisions they take and the manner in which they discharge their office.

Yet paradoxically almost, most such leaders reach the highest pinnacle of public office when they have entered the closing decades of the Biblical span. The exceptions are few and far between.

Happily any lack of youthful vigor seems to be offset by experience and an inner fibre of toughness that enables them to withstand the pressures that afflict them daily. This is well, for the destinies of nations invariably are in the hands of men in their aixties and up.

And in Mr. Pearson's case it is a measure of this hardihood, as well as of good fortune, that he is a stranger to hospitals in the personal sense.

Three separate issues have been raised by the Profumo scandal. The first, but in the long run the least important, is the issue of private morality. The second is the issue of public morality. The third, and most important, is the issue of national

This is an exciting picture; but it is far from that much but it is far from the truth.

The fact is that the Victorian code of sexual morality has wer been fully accepted by the British aristocracy and gov-ning class.

In the 19th century, visitors from Paris were frequently shocked by the sexual permissiveness they found in aristocratic circles in London.

Municipal Officials Hail New University

That citizens of Greater Victoria recognize the University of Victoria as their own university is testified to by their elected representatives

Victorians have fought, often bitterly, since 1885 to have a university established in the area. Justifiably, they take pride in the realization of their aim this Monday.

While university officials are grateful to the community in making the institution possible, citizens of Greater Victoria recognize the benefits accruing to a "university of the University Development Board, had this to say:

Mayor R. R. Wilson, former chairman

"The creation of the University of Victoria is an important development for this community, and in fact for the whole Province of British Columbia. It is the culmination of many years of hope and planning. The recent developments at the new campus give assurance of a bright future for the University of Victoria. We all look forward with confidence to the continued with of our own university." Reeve Stanley Murphy of Saanich said:

"This is the beginning of a new era in Victoria.

"A university which will soon approach future of this area economically, and guarantees the cultural atmosphere which complements the natural blessings we have."

Oak Bay Reeve George Murdoch said the founding of the university at Gordon Head was "the greatest thing that ever could happen to Victoria. "It will give a terrific economic stimulation to the area far more than tourist trafyear." he explained. Mr. Murdoch also pointed out it would be a "Godsend" to parents, who no longer will have to send their children to Vancouver for full university education.

"It will mean a great many local youngsters will be able to afford to go to university," he said.

Reeve A. C. Wurtele of Esquimalt said: "In conjunction with His Worship the Mayor of Victoria and the reeves of surrounding municipalities, may I, on behalf of the council and people of Esquimalt, congratulate all those who direct the affairs of Victoria College as that college assumes university status.

THE GOVERNMENT OF BRITISH COLUMBIA JOINS IN CELEBRATION Of the Official Opening July 1st of the

UNIVERSITY OF VICTORIA

British Columbians everywhere share the pride of their Vancouver Island neighbours on the occasion of the official opening this Dominion Day of the University of Victoria.

The growth to full degree-granting status of the University of Victoria is a tribute to the courage and energy of many British Columbians, and the Provincial Government is proud to have shared in their efforts. Over-all provincial expenditures for education have increased by 564 per cent during the last eleven years, and grants to our universities have risen by 601 per cent in the same period.

The constant expansion of our educational facilities, and the ever-improved training of our young people to meet the challenges and duties of the future, is a primary responsibility of all British Columbians. The official opening of the University of Victoria is a major step towards meeting that responsibility, and the Provincial Government joins in celebration of this great accomplishment.

Garden Notes

natoes Poisone

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS.

WEEDKILLER DAMAGE (E.M.M., Victoria)-I am sorry to hear that the leaves of your tomato plants are curling upward around the edges, for this is almost certainly the result of 2, 4-D fumes or drift from a careless weedkilling job somewhere in your neighborhood. Every other disease or pest of tomatoes will cause the leaves to curl downward rather than upward-this is why I am so certain of my diagnosis.

It is possible, although not so likely, that the withering of the foliage on your peonies and ranunculus plants was due to the same cause. These plants are much more resistant to weedkiller fumes than tomatoes, and it could be that they are suffering from too much watering and poor drainage, which causes the foliage to die down prematurely.

There isn't much you can do to help your tomato plants, for once the poison is absorbed into their system, you can't counteract it in any way. In mild cases, a daily spraying of the foliage with a weak fertilizer solution has been known to help them grow out of it, especially if the fertilizer is one fortified with trace elements, such as Hyponex or Rapid-Gro.

FAST-GROWING BERUIN (C.W., PAST-GROWING BIRKINS (C.W., Nanaimo)—One shrub that puts on growth at an amazing rate is the Butterfly Bush, Buddleia magnifica, sometimes known as Summer Lilac. It bears heavy recemes of rosy purple blossoms with a strong honey scent and very attractive to colored butterflies. Others which make rapid growth are Leycesteria, Escallonia and any of the Hydraneses.

The Ajuga and Pachysandra you The Ajuga and Pachysandra you mention are plants used ordinarity as ground cover in places where it is difficult or impracticable to grow grass. Ajuga reptans, commonly known as Bugleweed, grows to about six inches in height and spreads by rooting stems. It has blue or white blossoms and there are varieties available with colored and with variegated foliage. Pachysandra terminalis, the Japanese Spurge, has the same creeping habit of growth, with glossy, dark green, spoon-shaped leaves.

MOULDY STRAWBERRIES (L.G.E. Saanichton)—The dirty grey mould on your strawberries was mildew, a fungus infection. It is too late now, of course, to do anything about this year's crop, but at least you can prevent a recurrance in future years.

in future years.

As soon as cropping is finished, elip all the leaves off the plants, rake them up, and be sure to burn them. As soon as new leaves appear, spray with a mixture of captan fungicide and wettable sulphur, 2 tablespoonfuls of captan and 4 of sulphur per gallon of water. Next spring, use the same spray, starting in early April and treating the plants every 14 days until the fruit is formed.

I think you'll be pleased and surprised at the sparkling color and clean appearance of the berries under this captan-sulphur treatment.

POISONOUS RHUBARB (V.V.M. Royal Oak)—It is perfectly true that rhubarb contains a poisonous element, oxalic acid, but it is found also in spin-ach, and look what spinach has done for Popeye the Sailor!

Oxalic acid is found in all parts of the rhubarb plant, but more concen-trated in the leaves, which could make you ill if eaten. The concentration is lowest in the bare stalks, and is no more injurious than the caffeine in coffee or the dozen and one other poisons we take into our bodies every day and eliminate without harm to our health

Brigitte Cleo in a Towel

LONDON (NANA)—You haven't seen anything until you have seen Brigitta Bardet in her Cleopatra black wig which she wears for her Joe Lovino picture in Rome. And in several scenes she wears nothing except a towel.

What a relief that British Equity has put its veto on The Christins Keeler story. Although heaven knows the screen is full of similar stories in which the heroine makes a happy, normal thing of the sidest profession.

R. J. Wagner is in Rome closing up his apartment, then he flies back to California to make Marion Dones Mrs. R.J. . . , but unless a certain picture materializes in Hollywood, they will be in Paris, come September, for A Shot in the Dark with Suphis Loren and Peter Sellers, Max Schell is trying to work matters so that he can take his Hamlet from Hamburg to Paris for three works before he starts The Light of Day with Melina Mercouri and the ubiquitous Peter Sellers in Istanbul.

Between golf and dubbing The Fall of the Roman Empire, Stephen Boyd keeps busy in Rome and Madrid. He'll be off to the States for a breather arid to pick up his naturalization papers, then to London for The Third Secret.

Joan Simmons and husband Dick Brooks and their children are safely ensconced in a big London apartment until the Fall. Then they take off for Bangkok, where Dick begins Lord Jim with Peter O'Tests. Hills Pranksvich, former feetball star and now the popular heat of Columbia productions in Europe, is in Bangkok to look over the locations for the film. Everyone who has anything to do with picture-making today, has to love travel.

Otto Preminger is busy putting The Cardinal together at the Shepperton studios, a fast 40 minutes from London. The death of one Pope and the election of a new Pope are in the story, and so cameramen and sound technicis were busy filming and recording the crowds outside the Vatican. From all I hear, John Huston, the director, may hn Huston, the director, may find himself nominated for an acting award.

The no admittance sign outside the Becket set at Shepperton gets bigger and longer. It now reads, "Positively no admittance, except by written permission of the producer." Actually it isn't that difficult to get in and Elchard Burton, who likes the press, is not adverse to chatting with reporters, as long as Elizabeth Taylor is not around She has not been around quite so much since. not around. She has not been around quite so much since the reviews about her performance in Cleopatra. That's a pity, because she has lost a great deal of weight and looks more like the glamorous Liz of old.

My good friend John Wayne couldn't resist it. One of the Hawaiian natives swimming in his Donavon's Reef is his six-year-old daughter Aluss. She has been appearing regularly in his films, and of course she will be a movie star when she grows up. But then again, this early exposure may make her loathe the cinema.

FACTS ABOUT EYES

Only two persons in one hundred have perfect eyes. However, many more than this obtain normal vision because the eye is able to compensate for slight irregularities, but often this clear vision is obtained only by sacrificing comfort.

Surveys indicate that seven out of ten people require glasses for one purpose or another, if they are to have clear, comfortable and efficient rision to which they are entitled.

OTTAWA (CP) - John Wyllie, Montreal novelist and critic, says too many serious novelists fall into the category of "onion-peelers."

"I would suggest that there nust be writers with the courage to commit themselves on the important issues which face us all," he said.

Mr Wyllie defined "onion relers" as writers who carry about their own growing pains . , as literary hypochondria the hang their merbid anxie thinnest excuse for a plot.

"We need authors who will lare more than the formula writers and will present the public with a provocative picure of humanity as we sta on the brink of disaster, or on he threshold of the greatest era in history."

Mr. Wyllie said that those who have the real skill and writers who have gone before.

"They have the tools, but too many of them seem lack the will to use them."

Send Child Into Orbit!

Suggests ART BUCHWALD

The success of Russian commentures Valentine Tereshkova's space flight has proved very embarrassing to space officials in the United States.

Up until the 26-year-old darling of the Communist world was launched into orbit, Americans had been taught that space travel was for supermen and it took years of training, superb flying skills, superior intelligence, and male courage to handle the intricate space capsules that went whizzing around the globe at 1,700 miles an hour.

Then along came Valentina, fresh from a textile factory, whose only experience with space had been as a parachute jumper, and many Americans were distilusioned. The Russians proved if nothing else, that almost anyone could go up in space and come down again.

NASA laughed at American women when they said the Russians planned to send a woman into space, but they aren't laughing anymore. Space travel as far as NASA was concerned was man's work and no woman could possibly qualify for

Well, Valentina proved that NASA was wrong and now it's up to the United States to do something spec-tacular to show the world that space travel is not difficult, but easier than even the Russians have made it.

The best way to do it is for the United States to send up a child under 12 years old. Many parents, par ticularly during the summer vacation, would gladly volunteer one or more of their children for the experiment and many children, who claim they don't want to go to camp, would gladly volunteer for the assignment.

Now, there's a nine-year-old boy who lives with us . .

This fry salvage work of the fisheries department is a little-known and unsung part of a fisheries officer's regular prolection services.

The story is simple. The sal-mon fry, which are hatched away up the little creeks and streams that feed into the main rivers, are now making their way slowly down to the main rivers, and then to the ocean.

But with hot weather the little creeks and streams which were roaring torrents in winter ly start to dry up. The Salmon fry are deticate and will live only a short time in a bucket without expgen. If they are only to be earried a short distance to the main river the expgen is not necessary but for the longer haula, the practice now is to use expgen to give the fry every break to grow up.

Logging roads have made many of the rivers and streams more accessible to fisheries officials and in many cases trucks can be used to haul the fry cams from stream bed to the main rivers. Other times the fisheries officials have to bug the fry ears a great distance, even miles, to the main river.

THAT'S IT

Once in the river there isn't much the fisheries officers can do to help the fry. They become prey for hungry trout and when they enter the sea they face another danger which has recently become apparent to research officials.

Thousands and thousands of salmon fry will die in the next couple of months in dried up creek pools and in landlocked river pools where the water becomes no warm it is lethal of complete runs of fish.

One of the biggest mortality is now thought that when is being carried out along these there is a poor run of fish in any one year, it may not only be traced back to the spawning weren't for the efforts of fish-escapement and river conditions eries officers in fry salvage of the brood year, but also to the work in the summer there would water temperatures when the fry emtered the sea. Tiny Village Comes to Life

Model Land of Little People Open Monday

The Land of the Little People has timed its big opening for Monday's Sidney Day.

The replica in miniature of a typical Canadian village complete with French section is the brainchild of a retired Sidney man who felt he wanted to do "something constructive" after years of clearing land for highways. highways.

It will take visitors about an hour to tour the three-acre tiny village on foot on T. C. Karr's property at 7894 Simpson Road, Sannichton. The model village, built in a scale one inch to one foot, is situated at the corner of Mount Newton Cross Road and Simpson Road.

It took Mr. Karr only three months to build what his Land of the Little People has to show so far. He hired helpers to speed up the opening. The land is scaled to represent one square mile and displays farms, a shopping centre, a church, cus-toms buildings, a post office, a saw mill, a ski tow, a large hotel, an island in a river, a railway station, a lake, a golf club, a country club and

Nothing has been left out. Mrs. Karr made true-scale figurines and put them inside the buildings.

The buildings are wired for electric light, street lights glow, burn are parked in garages, patients lie in hospital beds—in other words, The Land of the Little People could come to life tomorrow if blown up to life

Mr. Karr hopes his mighture enterprise will develop into a tourist attraction. Meanwhile he carries on perfecting the village day by day.

Mrs. B. E. Christmas and daughters, Robin, left, and Penny are here to visit Mrs. Christmas' parents, Col. and Mrs. M. Aubrey Kent, 228 Douglas Street. Group Capt. Christmas, who is also here with his family, has recently been posted from Larson

Many Tourist Attractions Close to Centre of Town

One of the last stands of original native art in British Columbia is Victoria's Thunderbird Park. Visitors to the city are seen strolling about the lawns of the Park, which is now maintained by the government.

As far as the visitor is concerned one of Victoria's main attractions must be the proximity of many of its tourist spots to the centre of town.

Within a half mile of the Causeway, where many of our tourists begin their city tour, there are dozens of points of interest. Not all these attractions are commercialized and therefore known to visitors.

Historical buildings, which still retain much of their old-world charm, line the side streets just behind our main thoroughfares. Bastion Square and Wharf Street are fine examples of old Victoria architecture. Although not all these buildings have been kept up as well as the old Customs Building, pictured below.

Close to the Causeway also is Fisherman's Wharf, Beacon Hill Park and the magnificent vista seen from the Dallas Road. At the intersection of Dallas and Douglas one sees the western terminus of the Trans-Canada Highway.

Antique, linen and china shops never fail to arouse admiration of visitors to city stores. In recent years several English tea shops have been added to the downtown area, as well as some excellent eating spots.

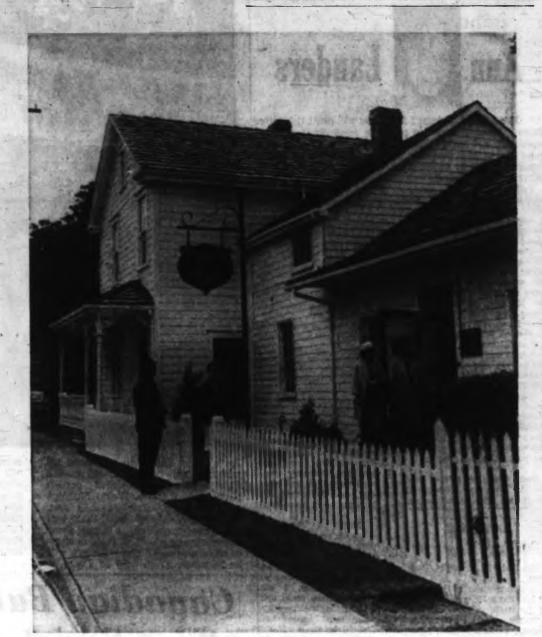

More and more the city's older buildings are being renovated, some just needing a coat of paint to make them very attractive stores.

Cluster lights and hanging baskets, of course, add a great deal to the streets and help make Victoria a little different from other cities.

Tourists frequently make a point of visiting the old Helmcken House on Elliott Street. Close to the centre of town, the former residence of Dr. James Sebastian Helmcken was built in 1852 and is probably one of the oldest standing wooden houses in the province. It is certainly the oldest residence in Victoria. Now maintained by the government as a museum, the house is filled with period furniture, such as an original Josiah Howe sewing machine. Seen entering the front gate are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mitchell of Troutdale, Ore., who are spending a few days here. Mrs. E. Seaton and Mrs. Hugh Miller, Victoria, are seen in the door.

An attractive part of Victoria's past is this brick building on Wharf Street, which has been headquarters for HMCS Malahat, the local RCN reserve division, since 1954. The stone foundation structure was built in 1875 as a Customs Building. Sealing crews and miners, heading for the Yukon gold rush in 1898, were issued certificates here. Other old-time buildings still standing on Wharf Street formed one of the original business streets of British Columbia.—(National Defence Photo.)

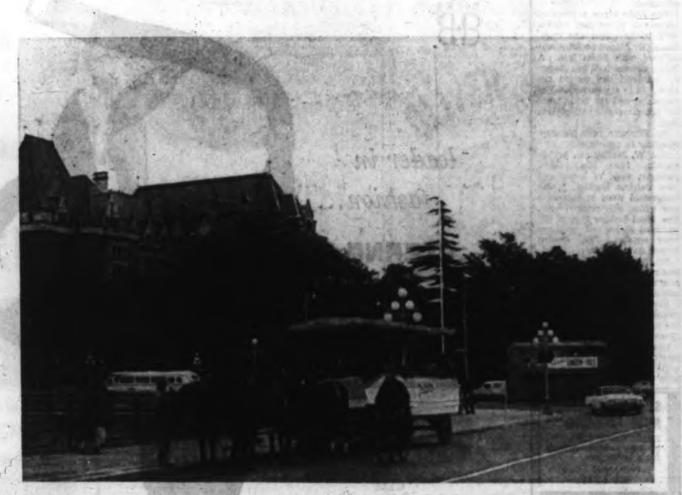

Victoria has always been known for its gardens and this year seems to have produced a bumper crop of beautiful roses. Here in the gardens of the Empress Hotel, gardener Roland Lindner, examines one of the large blooms he has just pruned. Filling his wheelbarrow are flowers culled from bushes.

One of the city's main attraction to our tourists is its many antique shops. Here a Seattle couple examines English china through a downtown store window.

The start of many enjoyable sight seeing tours through Victoria is the tally-ho. Here horses are being watered while the driver waits for more passengers. In the background can be seen another method of transport available to the tourist who wishes to have a better look at the city.

the double decker London bus. The Empress Hotel, Parliament Buildings and causeway with its cluster lights, gay with hanging baskets, create a unique and pictureague scene to the visitor entering the inner harbor abourd a boat.

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you will print this letter from a "young fossil" to prove to adults that all teen-agers are not nutty. This white stork missed out on its last migration to Europe from Southern Rhodesia when it somehow lost about five inches of its left leg. It was found by a motor-ist, dying near a main road in Salisbury.

The motorist, J. Dempsey, who owns a pet shop, took the bird home and force-fed it.

Having revived the stork (it now swallows two pounds of meet a day), Dempsey worried how to get it back on its feet.

He experimented with a plastic leg. Then offers of help came. A Salisbury sculptor offered to shape a mould of the sturk's good leg from which a local firm would make a fibre giass limb. This will be attached by surgery, by driving a stainless steel pin through the bony leg below the "knee" and moulding the glass fibre to it.

As soon as the stork gets used to its artificial limb, it will be ringed about the foot (the good one) and shood ented with a plastic leg. Then offers of NANAIMO—Some people have got so deeply in debt they cannot afford to take jobs. The only way they can live is to stay on welfare, Bud Handley of Port Alberni told labor council members Friday night.

Mr. Handley wants the council to support his motion to urge the provincial government to alter the Garnishee Act to leave a minimum of $50 a week instead of $30 as

Today a man with a family can't live on $30, he said. He is better off on welfare. That is why some who get in too deep stay on welfare. "I believe if the minimum was raised it would encourage those who are heavily in Nanaimo Issue

Meanwhile, there has been strong reaction in Nanaimo following a Colonist story quoting a senior hospital official as saying the hospital board may not keep its prom ise to the voters to make the old hospital an institution.

The official said the promise was made just before two by laws totalling more than $2. 000,000 were put to the voters in 1958 for the construction of the Nanaimo Regional General

He said the promise may not be kept "because of changes in medicine and government policy."

It took Mr. Karr only three months to build what his Land of the Little People has to show so far. He hired helpers to speed up the opening. The land is scaled to represent one square mile and displays farms, a shopping centre, a church, customs buildings, a post office, a saw mill, a ski tow, a large hotel, an island in a river, a railway station, a lake, a golf club, a country club and a hospital.

Nothing has been left out. Mrs. Karr made true-scale figurines and put them inside the buildings.

So, lelly, I stuck a pound note in the pociet of my shorts and descended to have a look around. There was all the usual Oriental small stuff, which passengers and crew were inequidly considering but I saw nothing at first to interest me, until abruptly I heard a sharp little puppy yap, and turned to see a native operating a small toy...

It was a little, white, fluffy dog, 10 inches from mose to tail-tip, seven inches high, with one brown our and a brown spot near the quivering tail. And as I watched, quite enchanted, it took three or four tentative and wholly natural steps toward me, tail wagging, stapped, tilted its head toward me and remarked on a rising note of inquiry. "Yap, yap, yep."

It worked, of course, by remote control from two batteries in a handle at the end of a wire "leash." It was of Japanese make, and there is no doubt about it, is was beautifully and realistically done. I caught it up in a delight I couldn't concent, whereat the native, I'm sure, premptly doubted the price.

There are many in Greater Victoria who will teel keen regret when they hear that Cloverdale, the stone house built by Dr. W. F. Tolmie, one of the factors in the Hudson's Bay Company, is no more. It had much historical interest of the early days and as the birthplace of Dr. Simon Tolmie, a premier of British Columbia.

There are also many happy memories of John Tolmie and his three sisters, Miss May, Miss Jenny and Miss Ettie.

Jenny and Miss Ettie.

John, though not the eldest son, stayed at home and with his father looked after the farm, so on his father's death he became head of the household and with his sisters dispensed the hospitality it had always been noted for, May was the homemaker and had a welcome for all with her sweet smile. Jenny and Ettie lent life and galety to the home.

Their man interest was St. Luke's Church.

Their main interest was St. Luke's Church, Cedar Hill, to which they drove every Sunday, no matter what the weather, in their high, brown dogcart, John and May in front, Jenny and Ettle on the back seat. They all sang in the choir and John rang the bell, greeting in the choir and john rang the bell, greeting everyone with his kindly smalle as they entered in the choir and John rang the bell, greeting everyone with his kindly smile as they entered the church. If the collection was short, he always had enough in his pocket to make it up. In cases of sickness and sorrow the Misses Tolmie were always among the first to lend a helping hand, often taking those who were lit to Cloverdale to nurse them, especially children from the Rectory.

one of the Empresses. Ettle also went to Scotland and visited their father's people, and every summer they climbed Mt. Rainier in Washington.:

After John's death Dr. Simon Tolmie took over the old home and the three sisters bought a house in Victoria on Richmond Avenue, which they called Cloverbray. They enjoyed being in town as it brought them closer to their many friends. They had a beautiful garden having taken many of the rare shrubs and plants from Cloverdale that their father had collected in many parts of the world.

Now they have all passed away and the ome they loved so well is going with them.

THE PUGNACIOUS GOLDFINCH

I. E. GRANT

Not long ago (on Outdoors with the Experts) Dr. Clifford Carl said it was the belligerent male birds who tapped on windows. We beg to differ with him. Although male robius, thrush and flickers have knocked on our glasstopped door, the female goldfisch has been the most persistent.

The first time she took a load of cotton from the holly tree by the back porch she happened to see her reflection in the bedroom window. Keeping a tight grip on her cotton she flew to the window pecking and beating the glass with her wings quite oblivious to us humans, but every time she returned for cotton she banged on the window. Even after her nest was finished, she returned each afternoon to peck at her reflection in the glass. If we drew the curtains, she flew to the upstairs window, directly above, to continue her fight. But after she began to sit on her eggs she was too busy to bother about other females. All this time her little mate stayed in the background.

Unfortunately, a predator destroyed the young birds before they were big enough to leave the nest.

Another year we had the rare privilege of watching the pretty young birds. One evening we heard a commotion in the maple tree by the creek. Presently, the whole family came down to the pool still arguing. Apparently, the young birds did not want to take a both, but their parents insisted. The children stood on the edge refusing to get even their feet wet. Finally, papa goldinch plunged in and began to splash and dip in the water. We could imagine him saying, "Look what fun I'm having." Egged on by mamma the little green birds were soon in the water. The next evening they did not have to be told twice to go and take their baths.

Cur little friend is back. For three days the fellow swore upon his mother's soul that he would mail the parcel. And he did. It reached Vancouver safely. I should have been heart-broken had it not.

And the other day, because the grandson is now nine and quite beyond such nonsens Little Aden came to Ceddes Wyck. And Dimity, fat, elderly and lazy, has failen at last. She has capitulated with a whole-heartedness which rocks one and all.

She adores him. When I first put him down on the floor and he walked toward her this eyes light up, too and stopped to greet her, it was instantly plain that he had made a conquest. Dimity stood, one paw lifted, and her huge liquid eyes seemed to widen and darken. She took a couple of hopeful steps toward him, and he met her halfway, with his pally little yap. She put her head down and sniffed and when the ridiculous hair-trigger tail went into action she was tremendously encouraged. She walked all round him, murmuring soft welcoming endearments—she was always a talkwalked all round him, murmuring soft welcoming endearments—she was always a talkative creature—and when she finally sat down in front of him, tongite lolling, and he walked straight between her may's, that was it!

Presently I sat Linde Aden up in a chair, and for the rest of the evening Dimity sat at his feet, gazing adoringly upward. The next day she looked all over the house for him, and was as restless as a mother hen short a chick until I produced him and set him down for her to talk to and caress. She is very gentle, and after one or twice knocking him over—and it worries her if Little Aden lies on his side with his legs paddling away uselessly and his little yap complaning that he is getting nowhere—she now just sits as close as she can without touching him. After all she is many times his size and weight, and this she understands.

All of which was some weeks ago. Now little Aden lives up on top of the bookcase in my bedroom, and every once in a while during the day Dimity may be found seated below, gazing upward with those huge, liquid eyes. They are both very happy.

Shenandoah Didn't Know . . .

THEY COULDN'T CATCH

APRIL 9, 1865

Victorians joined the world this day in a deep sigh of relief. General Robert E. Lee had surrendered his Confederate Army to Union General Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox. After four years and at a cost of 600,000 lives, the American Civil War-the worst in history -was ended. Except for continued resistance by the remnants of General Johnston's forces the guns were silent, and the world looked forward to a constructive peace.

Victorians had followed the bloody struggle closely through the pages of The Dully Colonist. For many, victory seemed almost as sweet as it did for the Yankees themselves.

But July 24, the city was electrified by news from California. Apparently the Confederate commerce raider Shenandoah, unaware that peace had been declared, was continuing its rapid destruction of the American whaling fleet in Arctic

The whaling barque Milo had tied up in San Francisco on the morning of July 20. The men packed aboard her said that after sinking their ships, the rebel commander, Lieutenant James I. Waddell, had bonded the Milo for $60,000 and told her to steer for the Bay city.

Labelling the Shenandoah a pirate, American news releases caused Victoria shipping firms anxiety. If Waddell had indeed turned pirate, he could not be expected to limit himself to attacking Yankee ships. Apprehension grew when they realized that it would be weeks before an American gunboat could be continent.

weeks before an American gunboat could be sent north.

San Francisco citizens urged the government to immediately wire British authorities at Victoria and request that they send a British warship in pursuit of the raider. This would save about three weeks' time. Since Great Britain had withdrawn her acknowledgement of belligerence to the rebeis, they felt that Britain should regard Waddell's acts as piracy. Because the Shenandoah had been armed by Englishmen, and the fact that Waddell used the British flag as a decoy to get within range of his victims, they believed it entirely legal. They also thought it would be "an excellent stroke of policy for the authorities of British Columbia to despatch a manof-war in search of the pirate in view of the Shenandoah making her appearance in their waters."

NO ONE COULD HAVE GUESSED in April, 1861, that the fighting begun in South Carolina would ultimately end in the waters of the northern Pacific Ocean.

War had caught the South ill-prepared. But what it lacked in materials, it largely overcame with foresight and daring. Confederate leaders early realized the desperate need of a navy, and initiated plans to build a number of armed raiders to destroy unprotected Union shipping. Many years later, in both world wars, Germany would practice this plan, with forbade her to aid the beligerents, the vessels could not be outfitted with armament. Upon completion, they would put to sea and at a pre-arranged spot meet a tender, from which they took on board arms and ammunition.

By this means, the South was able to build in Britain a strong fighting force, and one of the mean colorful chapters in its brief history. Constructed were the Floride, the Alabama, the Georgia, the Tallahames, the Chicks.

mauga, and Shenandoah.

After the war, the United States accused Great Britain of being responsible for damage done by Confederate raiders and claimed large reparations. In 1872, an International Tribunal awarded the U.S. $15,500,000 in gold.

IN THE AUTUMN OF 1863, the Confederate agent in Liverpool, James Dunwoody Bulloch, watched a suitable full-rigged ship with auxiliary steam power about to leave on her malden voyage to Bombay. Historians believe he was so impressed with her that he placed an observer abourd to report on her handling qualities during the trip.

At any rate, promptly upon her return the following year, he purchased her. Christened Sea King, she would be re-named Shenandoah when commissioned into the Confederate navy.

The Federal spy system in Europe, however, was so efficient that even while Sea King was en route to Bombay under private ownership, they knew Bulloch wanted to buy the ship and send her against the New England whaling fleet.

Despite this, Bulloch managed to have Sea

Despite this, Bulloch managed to have Sea King leave England, and on October 8, 1864, she slipped out of the port of London to keep a date with immortality.

At sea she met with the tender Laurel and was equipped with two rifled bow gurs and two heavy guns aft, plus small arms for the crew.

Lieutenant Waddell then took command of the ship from its temporary English captain, and tried to persuade the crew to sail with him. It was a bad time for recruiting. The famous Alabama had been sunk. Every man knew that the Union Navy had become very strong. Also, it was rumored that Capt. Raphael Semmen, former master of the Alabama, was to command the cruiser. Semmes was regarded as a hard-driving captain who took extreme risks. Only 20 men, some having served in the Alabama, agreed to calist. Forty-two had to be put ashore. They were instructed to peas the word that the Sea King had been wrecked on a desolate island called Las Descrias, and that they had been rescued by the Laurel.

Although forced to sail shorthanded, Waddell was able to enlist men from cuptured ships and brought his fighting strength to 51 men and 22 afficers by the end of the year,

BUT - THE YANKEES were not to be fooled that easily. They were sure that the story of the sinking was false, but were undecided as to what would be the Shenandouh's target: the rich Panama shipping lanes or the Pacific whaling floet. Surprisingly, no action seems to have been taken as they apparently waited for Waddell to make the first move. Their failure to send a warship to either area to swait the raider was to prove costly.

October 30 Waddell made his first capture, acuttling the barque Alina of Searsport, Maine. More vessels fell victim, and on December 16 Shenandoah passed Cape of Good Hope. She anchored at Melbourne, Australia, on January 25, 1865. Here she had to wait 24 days for propeller repairs.

Although the Australian people were friendly, the government was not. Eighteen men descried, threats were made against Waddell, and there were rumors of plots to blow up his ship. Nevertheless, he managed to enlarge his crew there.

Violent storms marked the next lap of the journey. For weeks the Shenandoon skirted Pacific islands looking for prey, puss-

ing only to trade with natives who came out to the ship in their canoes.

April 1, they located four of their quarry at Ascension Island (Ponape) in the eastern Carolines. Anchoring in the narrow entrance of the harbor, Waddell sent out four boats to capture the whaler Edmund Curry, the barques Harvest and Pearl, and the ship Hector. Taken completely by surprise, the vessels surrendered immediately. The luckless craft were burned.

THE ABIGAIL'S SECOND OFFICER,
Thomas Manning, joined the rebels and proved invaluable to Waddell. He not only gave information as to the location of the whaling fleet, he actually served as pilot and steered the Shenandoah to the spot.

When Waddell reached the Bering Sea, June 16, neither ice nor fog could deter his finding the ships he had crossed the world to sink. With the unerring sense of a bloodhound. Shenandoah captured vessel after Excitement reached a fever pitch along the entire west coast of North America, as Waddell continued his voyage of destruction. The inaction of both the American and British authorities did nothing to decrease the tension.

One captain taken prisoner June 22 insisted that the war was over. But because he lacked documentary evidence Waddell refused to believe him. The next day the San Francisco ship Susan Abigail was captured. Aboard her were newspapers of recent date. They said the Confederate government had retreated to Danville, that Lee had surrendered to Grant, but that most of the Army of Northern Virginia had joined Johnston's army in North Carolina. (Johnston surrendered April 26.)

Waddell disregarded all but a small proclamation that was printed. In it, President Jefferson Davis announced that 'the war was to be continued with renewed vigor. It said the Susan Abigail's doom.

While pressure was being applied to Vancouver Island Governor Arthur Kennedy to send a British gusboat in pursuit, the citizens of San Francisco presented a petition to the commandant at the nearby naval yard on Mare Island. It asked that he telegraph to Washington for permission to charter the new steamer Colorado, arm her, accept the services of a volunteer crew, and despatch her at once after Waddell. The commandant promised cooperation. On August 7, convoyed by the warship Saginaw, Colorado sailed for the north. It was announced that the American navy steamers Wauchusetts and Iroquois were swamping northward through Chinese waters. The net was belatedly being closed.

THE NEW WESTMINISTEE newspaper, The British Columbian, also prompted Governor Kennedy. It did not want a hostile mission; simply that a ship be sent to "notify the Shenndon of the conclusion of a peace between the North and the South." American officials called on the governor, asking his ad.

But Governor Kennedy replied that he could do nothing.

The whaling barque Goneral Pike sailed into San Francisco Bay with over 220 men from ships burned by Waddell the morning and the departure of the Milo. The men said Waddell had bonded the Pike for $45,000. When they had complained to him of the lack of adequate provisions for the lengthy voyage, he was reported to have told them to eat continuous the lumber vessels Milan and Vernon, siling through Juan de Fuon Strait, were

Two days after Saranac steamed northward, USS Sawanae paused at Enquimalt. She, tee, would sail after the raider.

Provincial Constable Willie McMynn and His Reckless Assistant Were Too Much Law for

On a morning 46 years ago when Superintendent William Graham McMynn assumed the rank and office of head of the B.C. Provincial Police, his Victoria headquarters staff watched him covertly as he passed, without sideways look or nod of recognition, to his inner sanctum.

Six-foot-two, spare and angular, in the mold of a Raymond Massey or a beardless Abraham Lincoln, in the months and years that followed few got any better acquainted with this strangely reserved man. I think perhaps shyness gave him his air of aloofness, and you got an additional hint of this in the clipped, low-toned precision of his Highland speech.

If, out of hearing, he was dubbed "Willie" by the rank and file, one thing was clear from the moment he swam into our ken: "What Willie wanted, Willie got." Accustomed, it seemed, to having every "t" crossed and every "i" dotted, Mr. William G. McMynn, despite his halting, almost off-hand delivery could wither a delinquent with almost the same effect as 2-4-D on a garden weed. Unhampered in those days by boards of enquiry or evidence under oath, his instant dismissals set a new pace, given in toneless, almost mechanical style.

With little or no public relations sonse, I have seen him hang up the phone on an irate cabinet minister with perhaps the same dispassionate air that, perhaps 30 years before, he displayed as he shacked a prisoner round a pine tree as prepared to camp for the night in the Midway Mountains. All his police service, by the way, had been in the Tulameen-Similkameen country, part of the Yate police district that ran from North Bend in the Fraser Canyon to Greenwood. With Kamloops as sub-control point, this meant that 15 men were the law in something like 7,000 square miles of rough country.

McMynn's first station was Rock Creek, on the horse stage route between Midway and Camp McKinney, with mining camps springing up right and left, saloons never closing day or night, and transient labor always on the move. In this period of the Kootenay mining boom there were stray knifings, shootings and hold-ups but somehow the police always managed to cope.

It was a year or two later that Const. Mc-Fage 6—The Daily Culenist, Sunday, June 30, 1968

THE PHANTOM OF THE MOUNTAINS

Mynn got an assistant, a young Englishman whose antics helped further enliven the law enforcement scene.

Buried His Prisoner

ON ONE MEMORABLE OCCASION he chased a couple of cattle rustlers on horse-back and catching up with one, disarmed his victim and buried him up to his neck in sand! After which he successfully tracked down No. 2. Trouble was that in the meantime No. 1 got alightly addled in his brains from an excess of heat and perhaps the snakes. Anyway there was quite a little to-do about it, but after all—15 men!

Into this so-called gay 90s border scene there drifted one day another problem in the person of Mr. Martin Sutherland Everitt who, had he been a fictional character, would have been dubbed the "Phantom of the Mountains" due to the uncanny fashion in which he moved.

Martin was an American descended, it was said, from famed Edward Everitt, main speaker at the Gettysburg battlefield on the day that President Lincoln also made some off-the-cuff remarks. Unfortunately Everitt said is no longer remembered.

Martin was in his 30s, handsome, well-moken and a hishwayana.

Martin was in his 30s, handsome, well-spoken, and a highwayman. Scene of most of his exploits had been north-eastern Washington and Idaho's mountainous Coeur d'Alene country. Came a day when, for change of pace, he visited B.C. and held up a stage between Greenwood and Grand Forks. He didn't bother the inside passengers, merely took the strong box, and it being dusk and no one remembering what he looked like, the police were a bit hamperred.

Stage Line Rivalry

AS STAGE COACHES enter the theme of this story perhaps a word is necessary on the local transportation set-up. Opposition stages the International Flyer and the Columbia, ran between Republic, Washington, and Greenwood B.C., in cut-throat competition that was enlivened by repeated court injunctions, liens and writs of restraint, while on the side each tried to lure the other's drivers away with promises of better pay. Each line had its loyal following, each trying to beat the other's time, striving always for public endorsement. At the height of this competitive struggle people around Grand Forks and Greenwood were just waiting for the day when a six-horse Flyer tried to pass a six-horse Columbia stage where the road wound around the cliffs overhanging the Kettle River. It would either be the greatest feat of stage driving in living memory or the most colossal amash up!

memory or the most colossal smash up!

It was soon after the B.C. stage holdup that Everitt touched up the Canadian scene again, this time sticking up a miner, Paul Breasard, as he lay asleep in his tent near Niagans.

Niagara.

No need to look for it on today's map;
it was a tunnel camp near the north fork of the Kettle, distinguished as the spot where one, Frank Ceddio, once emptied the hotel in light-ning fashion. He blew it up with dynamite! For the one death that ensued his was hanged.

Gun in His Face

IT WAS AROUND 2 A.M. when the masked bandit opened the tent flap to shine a lantern on the sleeping Bressard, and with the other hand stick a gun in the suddenly awakened miner's face.

None too gently the intruder turned Bressard on his face (with his boot) nimbly extracted a wallet from his victim's hip pocket, and equally deftly extracted $140 from it. Discarding the empty wallet he quietly withdrew.

Despite lack of communication, especially telephones, the police were notified and soon McMynn's old school tie helper was hot on the trail. Not only hot on the trail but it seems exchanging hot lead with the fugitive who ducked into the mountain rock and brush just south of Ansconds (another spot no longer on the map) and faded from sight like the phantom he was alleged to be.

If it seems that Everitt was again on a winning streak, still he had to reckon with that slow-spoken, angular Scot at Midway, Const. Willie McMynn. Willie, totting up the facts, found he was looking for a man who was tall, probably in his 30s, who had worn a knee-length yellow slicker coat and who not only had a gun, but apparently was prepared to use kt. All that summer, as Willie kept his ear to the ground, he also kept in particularly close touch with Sheriff Griswold at Republic, Washington. Whether they were lodge brothers or what I don't know, but certain it was that there was a very close tie between the pair.

Griswold, who'd been having his troubles with banditry, was pretty sure that Everitt was the culprit, but there didn't seem to be the slightest chance of proving it. Principal reason was that Mr. Everitt had connections, and none of his robbery victims felt inclined to put the finger on him. Griswold, however, brought one little circumstance to light; in an inaccessible cabin occasionally visited by Everitt, he found one day the short, yellow slicker. On the heels of this Prov. Const. J. A. Dinsmore of Grand Forks found a barber at Nlagara who'd shaved a stranger the morning of the Bressard holdup—a stranger wearing a short yellow slicker.

Ready for Challenge

ALL OF WHICH added up to the fact that if Griswold found himself unable to make a move, there were those across the border in B.C. ready and willing to match courtroom nicotics with the phantom.

As you have no doubt heard "What Willie wanted, Willie got", so it's about now that Mr. McMyrin went down to the border to have a little conference with Griswold and certain it is they then and there cooked up a deal which,

rge of robbery:

As the sheriff and his handcuffed prisoner pulled out on the stage it was soon apparent by their changed route that Idaho wasn't their destination and this resulted in some of Everitt's pals almost attempting a little jail delivery when the horses were changed at delivery when the horses were changed at Curley. Griswold, however, up on top next the driver, met the situation with a finger on the trigger of his Winchester as the would-be rescuers circled the stage on their horses. None however, got up enough courage in the face of the unwavering muzzle of Griswold's riffe rifle.

At the next change of horses Griswold was served with a writ of habeas corpus issued under the hand of Judge Jeffson of Republic, which the sheriff merely stuck in his pocket and gaily took his place in the Columbia stage theading for Canada. If he had ignored guns inheading for Canada. If he had ignored guns and a legal process, now came word that some more of Everitt's buddles were bent on catching up with him on the rival stage line. The Columbia driver, accustomed to a fast competitive schedule, was now under Griswold's additional injunction to keep the lead until they reached the border. The ride was one for the book, and as they tore across the line, Willie McMynn was waiting with a warrant.

on the heels of this unique operation, and telegrams flashed between Republic, Victoria, Vancouver and Washington, D.C. The U.S. consul-general from Vancouver made a personal check of the scene at Republic, then headed to Washington, D.C., with his report.

Everitt meantime languished in the Kamloops jail, exciting a good deal of newspaper attention by his gentlemanly demeanor. "A regular Claude Duval," they dubbed him. However despite the luliabilition across the border, came a day when Everitt faced Mr. Justice Paulis. Aemilious Irving in a Vernon Ansize court. For want of scasty identification the charge of shooting at Mr. McMynn's willing helper fell by the wayside, but despite his alibi that he was in Nelson the day of the Breseard holdup—disposed of by the Niagara burber—the fury stuck Mr. Everitt on a charge of robbery with violence and he got 14 years. CANTERBURY

By ETHEL HOPKINS

Standing in the valley of the Saur River, with a backdrop of hills, and rising above the clustering houses and shops of the city, stands the most sacred shrine of the English-speaking world-Canterbury Cathedral. Like a magnet it draws visitors from many parts of the world. So great is the esteem for the church that during the last war people of many nations heid their breath in fear that the cathedral would be damaged by enemy bombs, but it still dominates the city, a loved shrine and an inspiration to poets. All roads lead to the cathedral; no visitor need ask the way.

One of its earliest claims to fame was the martyrdom of Thomas a Becket, in the reign of Henry II, when four of the king's men burst into the cathedral and murdered him before the high murdered him before the high aftar. For centuries the tomb of Becket, who was later cannonized, and is now known as St. Thomas of Canterbury, was visited by countiess pligrims. Chaucer in his "Canterbury Tales" has shown a group of pilgrims, travelling leisurely on horseback and whiling away the journey to the shgine by telling stories.

Bilgrims and to be housed and relling stories.

Pilgrims had to be housed and fed; hostels and shops sprang up to serve them. Boosting the sconomy of the city, pilgrimage became, even at that early date, a major industry, Today, tourists flocking to Canterbury, replace the pilgrims of old; thus the economy of the city is still linked with the cathedral. cathedral.

To those who are interested in old landmarks, the church is appealing because of its place in history. It dates back to St. Augustine who founded a Christian community where Canterbury now stands. He was given a little church called Christ Church to carry on his services. Later, enlarged, partially rebuilt, and modified, it became k nown as Canterbury Cathedral. Still inter, it became part of a Benedictine monastery, which together with houses, granaries and other buildings, occupied an area greater than the present site of the cathedral.

In addition to changes in structure, the enthedral has had many changes of fortune. More than once, it was partially destroyed by fire; more than once it was rebuilt, and each time by famous hulldars. In the reign of Henry VIII it was despoiled of many of its treasures, treasures of bejewelled vessels of gold and silver of such wealth that Erasmus has been said to have exmunity where Canterbury now claimed, "Midne and Crocous might have been beggars." Again it was ravaged during the Puritan regime, when most of its stained glass was destroyed. In spite of the hazards of fire and plunder, it retained much of its ancient beauty. It has been restored and changed so many times that each generation may be said to have contributed to its glory. Though all traces of St. Augustine's church have disap-

Now is the Time to Study

Looking backward to the time our children were small I see the Wilson family headed for camp the minute school was finished at the end of June. Here, in a rambling house, built by the two Jims, and called appropriately "The House the Jims Built," the Wilson clan lived for ten happy summers.

They lived without electricity and all its abor mying appliances. Meals were prepared en a funny old wood stove with an oven that ditin't bake very well. Wood had to be chop-ped, water carried from a spring on the beach and there was the inevitable small house hidden among the trees at the back. For compensation the sea rose and fell just beyond the frost of the house. It was pure ck-to-nature living and we loved it.

There is an age, I think, for everything . . . and what a good thing that is! Happily we have our children what we are young and full of pep and enter. At that period we are able to enjoy the things our children like . . . including camping and such Now, I think comping is for the birds . . . as we grow older our idea of a vacation is quite different . . . comfort and luxury are the things we maint em.

things we insist un.

Today I am thinking of all the young mothers who will be going camping with their families this summer . . . either at a permanent camp or by our with tenting equipment and minimum cooking facilities. There are two coornities in camp cooking . . . food must be hearty (appetlies are king-sized) and food must be simple. No complicated dishes are advisable. One dich stews and conservices qualify on both counts . . . sturdy and silling and easily prepared and cooked.

Dehydrated products are a tremendous help for the travelling comper. They take up little space and they cut down on preparation time. A good stock of canned and packaged mixes is also a time and labor saver. He sure you include that little red and white how of MSG (Ac cent) and a bottle of meat tenderizer.

Hiscuit mix is possibly the most useful and versatile of all the mixes. Should you want to make your own here is the recipe:

BISCUIT MIX

1 pound abortening or lard, 9 to 10 cups unsifted all purpose flour,
1 than salt, ¼ cup baking powder.
This is a good rich mix. More flour to the pound of shortening may be used if a less rich mix is desired. Sift the dry ingredients and cut or rub in the shortening. Store in a covered tin and keep it in a cool place. For plain biscuits just mix the desired quantity of mix with enough cold milk or water to make a soft dough. Knead lightly and pat out on a floured board.

FOR SWEET BISCUITS . . . add cup sugar and 1 egg to 2 cups of ix. Milk to make a soft dough.

FOR ORANGE RESCUITS . . . Soak sugar lumps in orange juice to saturate. Press one lump into the top of each plain unsweetened biscuit before baking.

FOR HOT CAKES . . . To 2 cups of mix add 1 egg and enough milk to make a pouring batter.

FOR SAVORY BISCUITS . . . Add crisp crumbled bacon, chopped paraley or green onions, herbs, etc., to the mix.

Time was, not so very long ago, when it was said of Victoria that the sidewalks were rolled up at 9 o'clock every night.

This, of course, was silly and obviously untrue. How could the sidewalks be rolled up at 9 o'clock in the evening when there was no one out of bed?

As far as entertainment was concerned there was always an almost complete dearth of it in the summer. I remember quite distinctly when entertainment occupied about 40 column inches of space in The Colonist during the whole of three summer months. Last year, not counting the area occupied by pictures, theatrical, film, musical and variety show accounts ran to about 50 column feet in the same space of time.

These days, with the best will in the world, our side-walks are still not rolled up at right. We just don't have

This was quite an accomplishment but it doesn't bagin to equal the achievement of Victoria.

The "Smile Show," which is actually the voteran among the attractions, was for a time apparently homeism. There meened to be chances that it would blossom forth with its characteristic British music hall atmosphere at the Langham Court Thantre or at the Plane

Choreography is by Bebe Eversfield and lighting by Jack Trueman. That truly delightful performer, Ken Bostock, is in charge of public relations and viewing the situation from the reverse direction, I, for one, could not wish for a more charming public relation.

Arthur Budd's concert party is a newcomer to the lists which is certainty suthing in its disfavor. It has a home at the Langham Court Themre where it will continue, nightly at 8:15, through August 17.

At the world-famous Butchart Gardens there are "Sunset" variety shows every Monday, Wednerday and Friday through September 2. The reason for this upsetting of an otherwise regular schedule is that the visiting performers, concert bands from New Westminster and West Vancouver, have to be on their way home before there is any danger of the Pat Bay Highway being rolled up for the night.

The Festival is sponsored by the City of Victoria, the Royal Canadian Navy, the Victoria Public Library, the National Film Board and the Parks Department.

Last year a total of 10,400 people itended the showings.

All these four attractions are off and running tomorrow evening.

On Monday, July & there is a further spate of openings and, of these, two anyway have a distinctly more cultural air about them.

These two are both music schools and, oddly enough, they do not clash in interest.

Homer Simmons and George Scharl, who hall from the pleasant precincts of Sunland in California, are providing refresher courses in piano, organ and choral conducting. These are essentially courses for teachers designed to reveal the latest and best approved techniques and methods of teaching plane and conducting choirs and choruses.

Mesers. Simmons and Scharl start the ball rolling with a two-piano concert at the Empress Hofei tomorrow evening and there will be an organ recital at Christ Church Cathedral on Thursday.

At Glenlyon School on Beach Drive, music will also be the chief item on the agends when Dr. Clayton Hare and Durothy Swetnam conduct a summer school for plane and strings and, indeed, all exchantral work. This is all searntally for students. Alrendy a number of talented young musicians have

This also will be in evidence this summer, not just once but twice.

University Players will also ap-umr in the two Intimate Stage inductions.

These are shows with foreor-dained runs but our enthusiasm for them should not blind us to the fact that Don Messer's "Jubilee," perhaps the CBC's most folksy and unadventurous program of all, plays a one night stand at the Me-morial Arena on Tuesday. The Buchts Dancors, Marg Osburne, Charlie Chamberiain will all be there.

The TV camera has a devitaliz-ing effect. It will be interesting in-deed to see these performers live and real—even just once!

Returning from a trip to the Inca ruins of Pachacamac, some 30 miles across the arid surrounding desert from Lima, the babies and this writer succumbed simultaneously. Confined to our one room amid a welter of diapers and clothing, Jane had washed and was attempting to dry despite the allpercading dampness of the Garua, the children running alternate shifts of screaming, we coughed and meesed our way through four hellish days and sleepless nights. In the street below, a Limeno lotteryticket seller's incessant chant of what sounded like "Hari-Kari?" became an urge to liquidate ourselves in traditional Japanese fashion.

Our sanity was largely saved by the ministrations of the Maury Hotel's two kindly floor maids, Dominga (Sunday) and ulicita (Happiness). They also helped to ensure that our baby, Rory, would become the most spoiled brat on earth if we stayed long in Lima.

Tools Don't Make the Craftsman

By ERIC SISMEY

Woodworking in this do-it-yourself age is made easy by power tools found in many basements.

While some tool owners are quite skilled, few become real craftsmen. Craftsmanship is much more than the possession of fine tools; it is something inborn. Either you have it or you don't.

There is little room for crafts-manship in the modern factory. It is now usually found in the small craft shop, and in the workroom of the skilled hobbyist,

Last fall I stopped at a cottage just outside Naramala to examine a collection of wood survings.

I war greeted by Harry Amund-son, who, at 'that moment, was sticing slabs from a coast cedar-burl with a cross-cut saw. Mr. Amundson, a retired sestion foreman, has made woodwork and wood carving his avocation for man.

Harry Amundson was born in Nebraska, in 1890, of Norwegian parents. He came to Canada in 1913 and for nearly six years was employed by the Canadian Pacific on the Medicine Hat division. In 1918 he was transferred to British Columbia to become section foreman at Faulder, on the Kettle Valley division, remaining until retirement in 1955.

ment in 1955.

Faulder is in the hills behind Summerland and during the winter several feet of mow is expected. His cottage beside the track was isolated from the usual town conveniences; his children—three boys and a girl—walted 3½ miles to school at Minesia and the family never knew the convenience that electricity brings until he retired to Naramata.

Entering the house I was auton-

Entering the house I was aston-ished, almost overwhelmed, by the collection of outstanding handcraft, curved tables and chairs, gim-eracks, brica-brae, toys and count-less ornaments were evrywhere.

In fact the house was practically furnished with his handlwork.

One piece, particularly intriguing, was a table top, inlaid, Mr. Amundmen told me, with more than 900 pieces, so carefully assembled that a magnifying glass fails to reveal gaps between the many hundreds of joints.

Many hundreds of joints.

Another treasure, a drop-leaf table, was carved in a geometric design so complicated that even students of college level would find difficulty in reproducing the pattern which only an artist could carve. The table legs were deeply fluted spirals, two with a right twist and two left.

When I asked about the power to operate the lathe I learned that he had no lathe at Faulder, that the work was done with hand tools under the light of Coleman lamps. A model Red River cart stood on the table, complete in every detail down to the curved white horns of the ox between the shafts.

After examining and enjoying his treasures, one by one, we went out to the shop where he was making knick-knack tables from gnaried jumper trunks gathered from the hills behind Peachland.

Mr. Amundson has a power band mw now and a horne-made lathe, but his other tools show the polish of two score years' handling. And here in the shop is the evidence that a natural craftaroan, one who has the gift of original and pleas-parts. Final assembly, he said, exactness and care in putting pieces together is always the mark that distinguishes hand work from the run-of-the-mill production. We have anly to look at the work of our native people to realize that origi-nal design and faultless execution spring from their craftsmanship and not from their tools.

The Gothic is a happy choice for places of worship, for its lines lead upward toward the heaven above, and space is left for pictorial windows, the gerns of most old churches. Canterbury is unusually long, with a central tower two hundred, thirtyfive feet above the ground, and two wast toware with huge buttreases to give variety to the perpendicular

The ground plan is amazing. It shows a long rectangle, ending in a circular chapel, known as Bocket's Crown. The main part shows the purch, the move, choir, and Trinity Chapel, with shrines, tombs and small chapels on either side, Visitors usually enter through the richly decorated parch which is into the nave—the same nave opens into the nave—the same nave that in times gone by received Chaucur's pilgrims. Though stripped of many of its rich furnishings, it is still handsome with dark marble contrasting with lighter stone. The nave and choir are distinctly assurated by means of a massive stone screen with sense a massive stone screen with sense of a massive stone screen with sense of a massive stone screen with sense that the chair fluor is well above that of the nave. In carrier days, the common people might not go beyond the screen, except on holidays.

Today people of every race and crood are admitted, but there is a sign roading, "No dogs allowed."

Such a sign may seem unneces-sary; nevertheless, a recent visitor heard an altercation behind her. Turning she saw a woman, who upon being asked to remove her pet, argued long and angrily. When defeated, she called over her shoulder, "It is not Christian, I tell you." To dog lovers, dogs are people as are other visitors.

Beyond the nave the magnificent choir narrows into Trinity Chapel, and findly reaches the circular chapel at the end. Trinity Chapel is the shrine of St. Thomas, the shrine which brought the pilgrims shrine which prought the pigning through the ages to Canterbury. AND HER GRIM FATE

HMCS Fraser—ex-HMS Crescent—was commissioned in Chatham, England, by Cmdr. H. E. Reid, on February 17, 1937, and sailed in company with HMCS St. Laurent for Barbadoes. Here the two destroyers separated, and Fraser duly arrived in Esquimalt on May 3. Until July, when Skeena returned from the Spithead Review, she was the only destroyer on the station, which, unfortunately, was nothing unusual in those years before the war. But better days were coming for the Navy.

On April 14, 1938, Esquimalt welcomed four Canadian destroyers, Saguenay, Skeena, Fraser and St. Laurent, thus bringing more than 500 men to the port temporarily. This was a noteworthy event when the authorized RCN complement was only 117 officers and 1,222 men.

Skeena returned to Halifax in company with Saguenay 11 days later, while St. Laurent remained here. This decision was taken primarily because of the efficiency that would result from grouping the same class of ships to gether on the same coast. In November of that year Ottawa and Restigouche, the last two of the original C class R.N. destroyers, were taken over and joined their sister ships in Esquimalt.

St. Laurent was immediately known to all and sundry as 'Sally Rand,' whilst Rastiguoche became known as 'Rusty Guts.' Fraser now evenmanded by Cmdr. W. B. Creery became divisional leader of the four sister ships.

The fateful year 1939 began normally for Fraser, starting with three months of exercises in the tropical West Indies. In May she took part in the ceremonies surrounding the visit, of Their Majestles King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, and in June operated with the visiting R.N. cruiser HMS Orion from the America and West Indies station.

Hurried Departure

On the last day of August Franer and St. Laurent were taking part in some civic functions in Vancouver when a secret message caused them to depart hurriedly for the east coast. They arrived in Hallfax on September 15 and the next day saw them excerting the first of the fast convoys outward bound for England.

The months of the phoney war that followed were boring in the extreme for men so far from their homes and denied the chance of useful action, submarine activity then being confined to the cestern side of the Atlantic, where Britain was losing on the average one destroyer every 12 days.

In April and May of 1940 Germany over-ran Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France, and Britain itself lay vulnerable to attack. Four of our destroyers were then detached to assist in the struggle on the other side of the Atlantic, and of these one was Fraser.

She arrived in Plymouth on June 3 and immediately became engaged in the agonizing battle. When France capitulated on June 21, France was sent to St. Jean de Luz, on the berder between France and Spain, to assist in the evacuation of refugees. Here she carried out anti-submarine patrols, controlled the arrival and departure of the refugee ships, and engaged in a special mission which resulted in the rescue of several diplomats, including the Canadian minister to France and the British ambassarder.

Many thousands of soldiers and civilians were new being loaded into every kind of ship, indeed anything that would float, and many of these people had never seen the ocean in their lives. They had moreover just passed through the most harrowing experience. The few mem-of-war that were available were doing all they could to organize the traffic and protect the port, but the German army was advancing steadily from the north and the Luftwaffe and U-boats were becoming more active every hour. Officers and men were near exhaustion after several days and nights of this high tension drama.

Fraser would pass in front of her and take up position from the port side. It did not appear to Calcutta that the Fraser was leaving enough room for such a manoeuvre if both ships were to carry on as they were, and Calcutta therefore altered course to starboard with the object of letting Fraser pass shead of her. Not realizing Calcutta's intentions Fraser maintained her original plan and a collision became inevitable.

Wireless silence was naturally being maintained, since wartime regulations torbade a radio's use except in the presence of the enemy, and it does not appear that any visual warning was passed, or indeed that there was time to do so.

The first intimation that was received by the officers aboard Fraser of Calcutta's manoeuvre was the sounding of one blast on her siren, which indicated a turn to starboard.

Seconds later she struck the unlucky destroyer, and cut the fore part of the ship clean off! It broke away and capsised. But the bridge and all demonnel on it were left stranded on Calcutta's bow! The ship's after section remained affort, and had to be sunk in the early daylight hours of the next day.

Calcutta and Rastigouche between them reccued 16 officers and 134 of the men, but 63 were lost in this first casualty of the Royal Canadian Navy in that war.

Tragic Error

When darkness set in on June 15 Fraser and Rastigouche were on the way back to the United Kingdom at high speed, being then aff the mouth of the Grunde River and under the orders of the cruiser HMS Calcutta. About 2200 (10 p.m.) Calcutta ordered the two destroyers to form in line ahead astern of her, and Fraser, then about a mile and a half to starboard of the cruiser, altered course towards with the intention of approaching Calcutta on that side before circling astern and dropping into station. Unhappily, Calcutta thought that

He Lost His Horse, But He Found Zion

The present Viscount Samuel, second of his line, is a tall, spare, greying Englishman in his sixties who looks a good deal like his father, the famed British Liberal leader who died last February at the age of 92. The new Lord Samuel is currently teaching political science at the graduate school of the State University of New York in Albany.

Lord Samuel, who prefers to be known as "Professor" or "Mr.," was in New York City the other day in connection with the publication of his new volume of short stories. July, when the House adjourns for the groundshooting season."

I asked him about his father, who was described in one of his obituaries as "a man of inviolable integrity." Lord Samuel pondered a moment. "I think he was the last of the Stoics," he said slowly. "He had all the old Roman virtues. He stood by his principles and never wavered for a moment. As the Liberal Party grew smaller, his reputation grew larger."

Like his father, but independently of him, he established links with Israel, or Palestine as it was then, "My father became Britain's High Commissioner in Palestine after the First World War, but I had been there on military service before that. You see, when the war broke out I was 18 and volunteered. I went into the Royal Artillery, which was then horsed, I asked to be sent to the Middle East in order to keep my horse. Being young, I had visions of galloping into action with my battery and winning the Victoria Cross. Instead, I found myself installed in the desert as an intelligence officer specializing in Jowish affairs."

In Jerusalem where he met and married

In Jerumiem, where he met and married the future Lady Samuel, Dr. Chaim Weizmann converted him to Zionism. After taking a degree at Oxford University, he settled down in Palestine, his first command being a Jewish battalion of the Royal Fusiliers. "One of my privates was Ben Gurion now Prime Minister of Israel. The battailon's motto was 'No advance without security'."

The talk ranged over many places and people. In the course of a discussion on T. E. Lawrence he pulled a letter out of his pocket written him by Lawrence in 1919. It was a friendly note, written in Lawrence's own hand, regretting that he could not serve on a Middle Dastern group of which Samuel was chairman.

"In Bernard Shaw's house I later asked Law In Bernard Shaw's house I later asked Law-rence whether it was true that he was anti-Zionist," Lord Samuel went on. The two earlier Samuel books are both collections of short stories about Junell life, either satiric or nostalgic in character. "Critics have mentioned them with O. Henry and Somerset Maugham," he said.

Alone among contemporary novellets, it would seem Morris L. West oifically Catholic thomes which hold has the ability to produce novels on specifically Catholic thomes which hold appeal for readers of all faiths. Both The Bovil's Advesses and Boughter of Silence rested on purely Catholic premises yet was wide general reader-ship. Partly this is attributable to West's skill as a story-tollor, but partly. too, to the manner in which he can relate the strictly Catholic code to prob-

In his new novel he carries this trend to its logical agex by placing two as of power, the spiritual and temporal, in direct confrontation with each set. This is a large order for any novelist, and it cannot be said that at is entirely successful in fully exploiting the possibilities of so dramatic a situation. But at least it demonstrates a willingness on his part to grapple with major themes, and the end result has considerable relevance to the human condition at this moment in time.

West has written a novel as topical as today's headlines, and perhaps tomorrow's. Let us look first at recent news. Khrushchew's ses-in-law visits the Pope in Rome for a friendly meeting. The Pope himself issues a historic encyclical on world peace. Khrushchev halls the Pope as a "man of peace." Now consider the fiction. The newly-elected Pope in the story is a Ukrainian Cardinal who has spent 17 years in Siberian prison camps, interrogated periodically by Kamenev, the man who is now Russia's dictator. Over the years a mutual respect for each other's strength of principle has grown up between the two men.

At this point, the author must have asked himself what role he most wanted his church to play in world affairs. The winning of peace, obviously, and this becomes the life task of his Pope Kiril I. What develops is absorbing fiction if only because it expresses the yearning of all people, Catholic and non-Catholic alike. Could the Vatican, through an energetic, progressive Pope, induce the Russian dictator and the West's leaders to sit down together and work out a plan for gengine disarmament? Could such fiction

West handles his theme with the authority of his own Catholic back-ground the almost took holy orders as a young man) and his long service as a Vatican correspondent. The protocol, procedures and recondite rituals are all here. Also set out for the reader's edification is a secondary theme, involving a newspaperman and his Italian mistress. It adds little to the

What does add materially to its significance, however, is another sub-nidiary theme concerning a Jesuit priest. Jean Telemond, who writes a his-tory of man embodying the process of human evolution, and is denounced by the Roman Curia for so doing. This is a thinly disguised parallel to the case of the late Father Pierre Teilhard de Chardin, the celebrated Jesuit scientist whose Phenomenon of Man met with a similar fate. Telemond is one of the most appealing characters in the book, and his death leaves the story that much poorer.

The Shocs of the Fisherman is a superior topical novel which skilfully blends the spiritual with the secular. More significantly, it is another demonstration that the winds of change are now blowing from the Vatican into Catholic thinking around the world.—J.B.

Never having met Miss Maxwell, I am in no position to vouch for the accuracy of this diagnosis, but she tells us herself in her new book: "How true that was!" Having now accompanied her on this printed ramble through her past, I would gallantly dispute the validity of the inst line. She's a shrewd cookie, is Elea.

She wasn't around when pretty faces and trim figures were being handed out, so she worked out a media vivendi of her own - a bravado which she wears as a suit of mail. Before you can call her names, she calls herself names. "I have been variously referred to as a hippo, a rhinoceros, an Eskimo igleo durTHE CELEBRITY CIRCUS. By Elsa Max-well. New York. where does that leave her enemies? Disarmed.

Insult her? Impossible, she declares, hand on heart, "Insults I love, no matter whom they come from. I can respect the person who gives me a darned good crack, if the crack is well-worded and well-simed." You have to admire this kind of approach, even if you don't accept it at face value—and I don't. Read on till you get to Miss Maxwell's bote noire, Cleveland Amory, and you'll see why I'm skeptical.

Toward Amory, the historian of publicity, affins Maxwell feels definitely atrabilious. He has plunged so many banderillas into her that she lots him have it: "I seem to be one of his obsessions: he is always writing about me... he has made a lot of money on me, more than I've made on him." Then she dismisses him with the most acathing insult of all. "Me. with the most scathing insult of all. "Mr. Amory, sadly, is boring to me." The ball's in your court, Mr. A.

This competitive side of Miss Maxwell common out every now and then, but, in fairness to her, it should be said that her dudgeon is usually short-lived. After all, fat folks are supposed to be jolly, and she is, too, most of the time. Remember her famous feud with the Duchess of Windsor? It's all ended in this book. They made up on a voyage from France to the United States, and are now lovey-dovey once more. Let Elsa describe the reconciliation scene, when ship lurched as she was curtseying to the Duke.

The book is full of amusing stories about the performers in her "celebrity circus," and L mean performers. Somerset Maugham misses a grand slam at bridge because of his stutter, Mrs. Cafritz of Washington waltzes up to Miss Maxwell for a kind word and gets the needle instead, Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy is counselled on how to make her hunhand look older ("use bothly pins to keep his hair back") and so on. The chatter is endium, the mood determinedly gay, the egotlam affortismly immense.

Miss Maxwell's old friend, Neel Coward, a charter member of her set, writes an affectionate introductory note, in the course of which he says: "She has become a little more violent in her opinions than she used to be, a little more boastful, a little more intolerant of people who displease or bore her." Turning southward, Shenandoah rammed her way through ice fields and preceded down the west coast of North America. In her wake lay the debris of the Yankee whaling fleet. Twenty-nine ships had been captured, many after the armistice. All but four were burned. The four apared were used to transport the prisoners. Having run out of prey, it was Wadeli's intention to run into San Francisco Bay at night, capture the Foderal ironciad Camanche, which he knew had been shipped there, and demand ransom for the city.

Fortunately for Waddell, he never made it. Even with its dubious distinction of being the only ship known to have been sunk before launching in very long story), the newly-com-than a match for him.

But before capturing the city, Waddell, haunted by thoughts that perhaps peace had been declared, as all his captives insisted, decided to make sure. He fell in with the British barque Barracouta. She had left San Francisco on July 20, and carried newspapers which convinced him that the war was indeed overlined him that the war was indeed overlineds ordered the battery to be struck below and disarmed the crew.

But he was not ready to surrender yet. Although Shenandomh had sailed more than 40,000 miles, Waddell planned to make a rule of more than 17,000 miles to reach Liverpool.

MUTINY THREATENED when he announced his decision. It looked as if the man who had successfully evaded the whole U.S. who had successfully evaded the whole U.S. Navy which was by then searching for him inight fall at the hands of his own men. Some of his officers had been unnerved at the news of the Confederacy's surrender, and demanded that he steer for Cape Town. Waddell was adamant because he believed, "We will be sought after in the Pacific and not in the Atlantic."

The officers remained unconvinced and he found it necessary to tell one, "I will be captain or die on the deck, and this vessel will go to no other port than Liverpool."

The issue was put to a vote of confidence.

Seventy-one out of 116 supported his views and the crisis was passed.

Later, in England, Waddell admitted that during the balloting he "had a very anxious time, painfully anxious, because the officers had set a bad example to the crew." Once their banks was a wade, the more beneated to and decision was made, the men honored it and served loyally for the rest of the voyage.

About 100 miles from the Azores, it seemed that at last Shenandosh had run into the Yankee net that was now stretched halfway around the world. A vessel was sighted shead, lying to, apparently waiting for Shenandosh to come up with her. It was sunset, the wind very light, and Waddell quickly decided his course of

When British authorities boarded her, they found 36 chronometers. Apparently Waddell had used them to keep record of his captures, much in the manner western gunfighters carved notches in their pistol butts.

It would seem that with the exception of the New Bedford whaler Pavorite. Waddell encountered little resistance from the whaling men. Usually taken by surprise, any thoughts of fighting probably fied at the sight of such impressive fire power.

Captain Young of the Favorite, however, was not to give in as easily. Undaunted at the sight of the bared Confederate cannon, he pulled out his bomb gun, armed his men with muskets, and when ordered to had down his flag, shouted, "Haul it down yourself, damn you, if you think it will be good fof your constitution."

Startled, Waddell retorted, "If you di haul it down we'll blow you clear out of the

However, upon reconsidering the futility of his stand, Capt. Young surrendered his ship, Waddell admired his courage, but the spunky Favorite was quietly torched as had been so many others.

When the last man stepped ashore in Liverpool, the flery naval career of CSS Shenandoah was ended. The only Confederate Navy ship to circumitavigate the world was sold at auction by the United States consul for $78.942 gold.

She then passed into the hands of the Sultan of Zanzibar. In 1879 she was wrecked on a coral reef in the Indian Ocean.

And Lieut. James Iredell Waddell, perhaps the Northwest's only "pirate," the man who fired the last shot of the American Civil War, disappeared from history's view.

"How long since you been up the Gorge in a boat?" asked Horace J. (Bud) Sime.

"More years than I care to remember,"

I replied. "Why?"

"I'll take you up the Gorge - There's more history along the banks than even you know."

And so I presented myself to Leigh Taylor, captain of the Water Tourist, and off we started from the float in front of the Empress Hotel.

I returned an hour later, de-ciding that tourists must know more of our history than the resi-dents. For this cruise is exweekly popular and seven times day carries 23 visitors "up the orgo," where our forefathers lock their best girls in the long in the years that have gone.

I would think that James Douglas was the first man to go "up the Gorge." Just before he gave erders to build Fort Victoria he wrote: "A narrow canal passes the Fort, and runs five miles into the interior of the island, affording at one point a water power of incalculable force, and there's an abundance of pine, with other valuable timber on its banks."

Soon we were passing the old Custom's House, built in 1875, where the Klondike miners of '88 lined up for their certificates, and the Fort's preserved mooring rings and the brick buildings of What Street, once Victoria's Wall Street.

I do thirfk the directors could use some im-agination and save this wing. I know it's outdated, but, just the same. I feel it should remain. same. I feel it should remain.

Across the Gorge waters, where there are new homos crowding today, once stood "Bur-leith," the home of James Dunsleith," the home of James Dunsmair, brother of Mrs. Snowden. What parties there were there, and on the 24th of May it was always "open house" at "Burleith." for the elite of this place. Here, in "Burleith." were discussed the great political questions of the times, for from 1900 to 1902 it was the premier's residence.

Thought of the autumn day when the Duchens of Cornwall and York made the same cruise "up the Gorge," that I was making, and alighted at the float before "Burleith" and in the gilded drawing room had ten with Mrs. James, the gracious lady from Virginia. Virginia.

As we paused on the town side of the falls, I looked further up the inlet to Craigflower and thought of the day in 1853 Kenneth Mackenzie, freshly arrived from the sailing vessel Norman Morison, sailed up the Gorge to start his farmhouse.

And I thought of the day in arch of 1861 when Lady Franklin, widow of the great Arctic ex-plorer, Str John Franklin, went "up the Gorge," in a large Chinook cance, accompanied by Alexander Caufield Anderson, her nince, Sophia Crucroft and a son-in-law and daughter of Douglas Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Grant

Alexander Caulfield Ander-son's son, James Robert Anderson, has left us an absorbing account of one of the first trips "up the Gorge." In 1850 he was a student at the school, in the Fort, of Rev. Robert and Mrs. Staines, One day Mr. Staines hired an Indian dugout and tok his boys "up the Gorge." When he was an old man Anderson wrote what he reered of it:

"Not a vestige of civilization beyond the rude bridge across the beyond the rude bridge across the Gorge—not a boat or canoe to be seen, not a sound but the measured beat of the paddles, accompanied by the wild canoe song of the natives, disturbed the still of the forest primeval which fringed the shore, and we drank in the beauties of nature in our wonder-

By the time the Gorge was reached on our return journey, night had set in and the tide was running swiftly. We alighted and the Indians built a fire so that we could warm ourselves. The dark night, the half-naked crew, with nainted faces their bleed. with painted faces, their blood-curding yells, accompanied by a wild song, the boiling waters of the Gorge all thrown into relief by the bright fire, all combined to make a lasting impression on my mind.

"It was a tired, excited group

A Colonist account of the 24th of May in 1892 said: "Those who have seen the biggest crowds that have ever been 'up the Gorge' said that the turnout was not only the largest, but by all odds the best natured, the best behaved and, for that matter, the best looking, and one thing is certain, it was the best satisfied crowd ever....

As early as the 1880s the Gorge was coming into its own. There was a little hotel there, called the Retreat, and later came the Victoria Gardens, with a spacious dancing pavilion, and a float. The Colonist said "the pure and invigorating atmosphere will render the place doubly pleasant These gardens prove a welattraction and conve to the many who resort to the arm for pleasure.
